WINTER’S GREETINGS!
Yet another month has passed and we are entering December here at Anne Hutchinson School. For many different people we are entering a Holiday season. The month of December is often marked by gift giving and receiving, and celebrating with friends and family.

We are doing the same here at Anne Hutch, and this month’s ethical habit is Generosity. Generosity is more than just sharing things; it can also mean sharing time and talents. Our school community will be reading, "The Spiffiest Giant in Town" by Axel Scheffler and Julia Donaldson.

We will be giving out HEART recognitions to students who are caught being generous with others. In our Second Step Lessons students will be learning about building self confidence, understanding others' perspectives and accepting differences.

- Mrs. Gelpi
"Generosity is associated with better mental health, and it is linked to happiness. “And even small acts of kindness, like picking up something someone else has dropped, make people feel happy,” (Allen, 2018.)

Why is teaching generosity important?

"Generosity is associated with better mental health, and it is linked to happiness. “And even small acts of kindness, like picking up something someone else has dropped, make people feel happy,” (Allen, 2018.)
